Display Screen Equipment Assessments

The Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992 require Assessments of workstations to be undertaken to ensure that ergonomic and other hazards are not presented to Employees.

TGF provides a service to identify "Users" of Display Screen Equipment (DSE) (sometimes referred to as Visual Display Units (VDUs)) and then to undertake the specific Assessments.

In undertaking the process, TGF gathers data relating to the workstations, the people using them and the environment in which they are used. This is achieved using a combination of questionnaires, interviews and observation.

The resulting assessments identify any possible solutions to any identified particular problems. This is then presented in a resulting detailed DSE Report.

Where possible the Assessments are also accompanied by annotated plans of the premises and the workstations.
